THE INSTITUTE

Vision and mission

The Institute of Public Goods and Policies is a leading Spanish research centre in the study of public goods and policies.

Its mission is to contribute to the growth of scientific knowledge for the development of evidence-based policy-making in relation to political institutions, social policies, science, innovation, and the environment.

Our values, our goals

- ➔ Focus on public policies through comparative analysis of their definition and implementation.
- ➔ Focus on the management of public goods via the provision of social and economic incentives, notably through collective action.
- ➔ Interdisciplinary approach involving economics, political science and sociology.
- ➔ Commitment to scientifically excellent international research with a significant social impact and international relevance

Find out more: www.ipp.csic.es

Our Research

The Institute of Public Goods and Policies (IPP) is one of the five social sciences institutes (IAE, IEGD, IESA, INGENIO, IPP) of the Spanish National Research Council (CSIC), the largest public research institution in Spain and the third largest in Europe.

Our research focuses on the comparative analysis and understanding of the nature of public goods, the design and implementation of public policies, and the interaction of both, seeking to generate cutting-edge knowledge about the relationship between society, markets and the State.

Research projects are funded from national and international sources, notably competitive national R&D and European Framework projects, as well as research contracts and agreements with public and private institutions. We aim at producing knowledge valued by the international scientific community but also relevant to firms, civil society associations, institutions and governments. Currently, the IPP is one of most successful institutes of the Social Sciences and Humanities Area of the CSIC in both WOS and Scopus indexed publications outcomes and research funding from national and international competitive funds (2019 data).

The IPP integrates six research groups: i) Environmental Economics, ii) Rural Geography; iii) Citizens and Institutions; iv) Social Policies and Welfare State; v) SPRI- Systems and Policies for Research and Innovation; and vi) Scientometrics.

The UAM-IPP PhD Program

The PhD program in Law, Government, and Public Policy is our joint venture with the School of Law of the Universidad Autónoma de Madrid. The program provides a multidisciplinary environment where PhD students develop their analytical skills and advanced research capacities, grounded on a sound theoretical understanding, in order to address a wide array of challenging issues regarding Law, Government, Politics, International Relations, and Public Policy.

Research lines

- Private, Public and Global Goods, and its Protection
- Constitution, Democracy, and Rights
- International Studies and European Integration
- Government, Administration, Welfare State and Social and Equality Policies
- Person, Private Autonomy, Jurisdiction and Extrajudicial Solution
- Economic, Social and Business Regulation
- Public Policies for Knowledge, Society and Sustainability
- Local Government
- Political and Electoral Participation
- African Studies
- Urban Studies and Social Theory

The Seminar Program (2015-2019)

Our seminar program establishes a network of knowledge interchange between renowned scholars from all over the world and the researchers and doctoral students at the IPP. It usually runs 10 to 20 seminar sessions in a year and provides very valuable insights to participants and helpful comments to the speakers. Since 2015, our program hosted 62 seminars from speakers proceeding from the three research areas of the IPP: science and innovation policy, social and institutional policy and environmental economics.

The visiting program (2015-2019)

Between 2015 and 2019, the IPP hosted more than 50 leading young and senior scholars from all over the world. Some of them were awarded a Short-Term Visiting Fellows grant, an IPP funded program, which seeks to facilitate and promote international research collaborations and co-authorship of IPP researchers.

Visiting researchers collaborate with IPP researchers on research projects related to active research lines of the Institute. The IPP short-term visiting fellows program offers office space; access to the library; and support to cover travel and accommodation expenses in Madrid during the time of the visit.

Find out more: www.ipp.csic.es

The internship program (2016-2019)

Our Institute welcomes every year between 15 and 20 undergraduate and postgraduate students from both national and international universities and research institutions to offer them a supervised internship, lasting between 1 and 4 months, depending on the collaboration agreement with the proceeding institutions. Currently, we have agreements with the Universidad Autónoma de Madrid, Universidad Carlos III de Madrid, the University of Copenhagen, Indiana University Bloomington (undergraduate internships), as well as with the Universidad Complutense de Madrid, the University of Bordeaux and Indiana University Bloomington (postgraduate internships).

RESEARCH GROUPS

Environmental economics

Pablo Campos

Alejandro Caparrós

Pablo del Río

José L. Oviedo

Begoña Álvarez-Farizo

The group studies environmental public goods, focusing on both the valuation of these assets and their management at national or international level. The main areas of interest are forests and land use, renewable energies and climate change, and the main methods used are ecosystem accounting, discrete choice methods and applied game theory.

Even though citizens now have plenty of tools to engage and participate in public life, there is abundant evidence showing growing disconnect and dissatisfaction with traditional mechanisms of political participation. Issues of accessibility, accountability and transparency dominate the agenda of the relationship between citizens, institutions, and the political process.

Social Policies and Welfare State

From a comparative perspective, the group POSEB (Políticas Sociales y Estado del Bienestar) carries out research on social policies and the Welfare State. It focuses on reforms and their impact on citizens' life courses in democratic post-industrial societies. A major area of study is the recalibration of responsibilities (regulation, financing, provision) between State, markets and civil society in the articulation of both the productive and reproductive dimensions.

Other members of the group (non-tenured researchers)

- Inés Calzada, Project Researcher (WAE – IPP/CSIC)
Alessandro Gentile, Project Researcher (WAE – IPP/CSIC)
- Roberta Perna (post-doc IPP/CSIC, Juan de la Cierva-Formación)

Associate Researcher:

Pau-Marí Klose (Universidad de Zaragoza)

PhD students under supervision:

Media

Knowledge transfer by means of collaborating with the media and actively participating in public debates is a priority for the POSEB research group. Whenever possible, findings produced with the carrying out of POSEB research activities are shared with the general public via national and international media, as well as digital platforms and social networks.

- During the period 2015-2019, POSEB members have published more than 50 articles of opinion and Op-eds, among others, in the following national newspapers and blogs: Agenda Pública - El Diario, Catalunya Press, The Economy Journal, El País, Heraldo de Aragón, London School of Economics Europe blog, El Periódico, Press Digital, Público, UK Centre on Constitutional Change.
- Radio and TV interviews have also been broadcasted by: BBC (British Broadcasting Corporation), Catalunya Radio, Radio France Internationale, Radio Nacional de España, Cadena SER. STV (Scottish Television), TN Internacional-Canal 13 (Argentinian radio network), La Sexta, TVE, Telemadrid.
- Inputs have also been provided by POSEB members for the preparation of media reports to the request of the following: Agence France Press (French international news agency), ABC (Australia TV network), China's Caixin Media (Chinese nationwide media organization), Courrier Internationale – Le Monde (French media network), Helsingin Sanomat (Finnish newspaper), El Progreso (Galicia newspaper), El Punt Avui (Catalan daily newspaper), Faro de Vigo (Galicia daily newspaper), La Vanguardia (Catalan daily newspaper), L'Espresso (Italian weekly magazine), New America (Washington DC based think-tank, Pravda (Slovakian newspaper), Sputnik (Russian global online publication), Televisa (Mexican multimedia company).

José Luis Curbelo (on leave)

The objective is to achieve a better and deeper understanding of the role played by science, technology and innovation in modern economies and societies, by developing our capabilities to map and measure – tacit, codified or embodied in people- scientific and technological knowledge, as well as to contribute to the construction of a “science of science policy”. We aim to increase our knowledge of the interactions between political, economic and social processes and the activities of production, communication, transfer, and use of knowledge. The research activities integrates the work of well-established fields and disciplines and combines different traditions of theoretical and empirical research that today address the understanding of science and technology dynamics and their interactions with politics, society and the economy.

Systems and Policies for Research and Innovation (SPRI)

Work is organized in four transversal axes:

Actors and Strategies, Institutions and Organizations. Research centres, universities, firms, research groups, and researchers, and even public and political actors, are essential players in the knowledge system. Understanding the internal functioning of these actors, their adaptation strategies to new environments and their interactions in the processes of knowledge production, transfer and use, are key dimensions of the research line, as is gaining a better understanding of the impact of regulations and legal norms on the incentives that actors have for knowledge production, diffusion and use. Mobility of researchers, including academic promotion, is also elements of the way in which institutions and systems are shaped and reproduced. Science and Industry relationships are conditioned by general incentives and strategic choices; also the emergence of knowledge networks has become a structural feature of new knowledge systems.

Impact and interactions between science and society, between knowledge and the economy. The production, diffusion and use of knowledge take place in society in general and the economy in particular. The production of scientific and technological knowledge and their protection through intellectual property rights, patents in particular, have an impact on our societies by contributing to innovation and socio-economic development. The commercialization of knowledge and technological transfer, as well as the incorporation of highly qualified experts in firms are some of the standard modes of enhancing the socio-economic impact of R&D.

Evaluation of science, institutions and policies. Evaluation processes and practices play an essential role in the functioning of knowledge systems and policies. Evaluation refers to multiple dimensions: scientific activity, scientific journals and other means of disseminating research results, research and innovation policies and programs, institutions, organizations, and individuals. Assessing the socio-economic impact of science and improving the methodologies used in research assessment processes are also central parts of the research objectives.

Science communication, knowledge diffusion and public engagement. The interaction between science, civil society and the public. A better understanding of the way and the consequences of how knowledge is produced, communicated, protected and diffused is another key challenge for understanding the dynamics of science. Science as an institution has become a significant element in democratic governance as scientists' advice has become integrated in the regular policy process. The interaction between science or knowledge and the public is an essential element for understanding how science and knowledge is absorbed and adapted by citizens.

Scientometrics

The Scientometrics Group has collaborated closely with international partners from the publishing realm, scientific information suppliers, universities and government agencies and has actively participated jointly with SCImago Lab in some of the following products.

SCImago Journal & Country Rank

The SCImago Institutions Rankings (SIR) project is a Research Evaluation Platform and Ranking Generator to analyze research outputs of universities and research-focused institutions. The SIR platform aims at designing analytical tools to help institutions monitor and assess their research outcomes and make decisions to improve their research performance and funding opportunities.

The Shape of Science

The Shape of Science is a new graphical interface designed to access the bibliometric indicators database of the SCImago Journal & Country Rank portal (based on 2012 data).

SCImago Institutions Rankings

The SCImago Journal & Country Rank is a portal that includes the journals and country scientific indicators developed from the information contained in the Scopus database (Elsevier B.V.). These indicators can be used to assess and analyze scientific domains.

Webometrics. Ranking of World Universities

The Cybermetrics Lab focuses on the design and application of indicators that enable to study scientific activity on the Web

Pablo Campos

Research Professor (Profesor de Investigación)

- Pablo Campos Palacín is Ph.D. in Economics from University Complutense of Madrid (1983). He is Vice-director of the Institute for Public Goods and Policies (IPP) and head of the Group of Environmental Economics (GEA) at Spanish National Research Council (CSIC).
- Lecture in Applied Economics at University Complutense of Madrid (1981-1986). Visiting scholar at centres specialising in the economics of sustainable management of natural resources, invited by prestigious researchers in the field of sustainability of the use of natural resources at College of Natural Resources at University of California/Berkeley (2001), Centre for Social and Economic Research on Global Environment (CSERGE) at University College London (1991), London Environmental Economics Centre at University College London (1990) and Centre for Agricultural Strategy at Reading University (1989 y 1990). Member and twice-elected president (2002-2008) of Europe's first regional scientific Spanish-Portuguese Association of Environmental and Resource Economics (AERNA: www.aerna.org). Member of the London Group on Environmental Accounting: <http://unstats.un.org/unsd/envaccounting/londongroup/>. Associated Editor of Forest Systems.
- The main research work pursues to develop a green methodology for extending the conventional system of national accounts (SNA) with the objective of including the value of the environmental services supplied by the natural ecosystems to the total sustainable income (TSI) measured in a territory. That objective has been applied in his research projects for valuing economic multiple lands uses in Mediterranean climate regions, leading to an undergoing new methodology of agroforestry accounts system (AAS).

Alejandro Caparrós

Research scientist (Investigador Científico)

PhD in Economics (U. Complutense). He has been Director of IPP-CSIC between 2015 and 2019 and is lecturer at the University Carlos III in Madrid. In the past, he worked for the CNRS in Paris (France) and visited several Universities, such as Berkeley (US), Göttingen (Germany), Paris-Est (France), Paris II (France), Exeter (UK) and Bath (UK).

His research focuses on environmental economics and, more precisely, on the following issues:

- International Environmental Agreements and Game Theory
- Pollution Control and Climate Change Policy
- Climate Change and Land Use
- Ecosystem Services, Environmental Valuation and Green Accounting

José L. Oviedo

Tenured researcher (Científico Titular)

- PhD in Economics (Universidad de Cádiz, 2007), and former PhD student at the Institute of Economics and Geography (IEG), CSIC. He is associate research professor at the IPP-CSIC working in the Group of Environmental Economic Analysis (GEA), and a collaborator of the Rangeland Ecology Group of the University of California, Berkeley.
- His research work focuses on the econometric analysis of methodological and applied aspects of discrete choice experiments. The empirical context of this research covers three fields: (i) the application of stated preferences techniques for the valuation of environmental public goods for their integration in ecosystem accounting; (ii) the econometric analysis of revealed and stated preferences in land use models; and (iii) laboratory experiments for the analysis of cognitive and decision processes that allow for a better understanding and application of these techniques applied to the valuation of public goods. This research is developed in the economic analysis of Mediterranean forest and rangelands (Spain, California, Portugal and Tunisia) and it is being explored for coastal wetlands. He has now moved to the CSIC institute of Marine Sciences (ICMAN), in Cadiz.

Pablo del Río

Research Scientist (Investigador Científico)

- Pablo holds a PhD in Environmental Economics (Universidad Autónoma de Madrid), a M.Sc. in Economics and Business (Universidad Autónoma de Madrid) and a B.Sc in Law (Universidad Nacional de Educación a Distancia).
- Previously, he was a lecturer for a decade at the Department of Economics and Business of the University of Castilla-La Mancha where he gave lectures on Environmental Economics (Faculty of Environmental Sciences) and Econometrics (Faculty of Economics). In addition, he was vicedean for external relationships at the Faculty of Economics.
- His main areas of research are at the cross-road of Energy Economics, Environmental Economics and Innovation Economics. In particular, he has done extensive research on the analysis of support schemes for renewable electricity, the interactions of climate and renewable energy policies and on the drivers to eco-innovation in industry, the energy sector and transport.
- He has actively participated in six European-funded projects on renewable energy promotion support schemes in the EU since 1999 (IntraCert, Admire-Rebus, Green-X, Beyond2020, Towards2030 and AURES) as well as three other international projects on climate change mitigation funded by the EU and other institutions (see details below).
- He has almost a hundred international publications, 75 peer-reviewed of which are articles in international journals, 12 Chapters in leading international publishers, two coauthored books in leading international publishers and several policy reports for international institutions. In addition, he has two coauthored books in Spanish publishers and more than 30 articles in peer-reviewed Spanish journals.

Post-doctoral researchers

Christoph P. Kiefer: He is a Postdoctoral Researcher at the Environmental Economics Group (GEA), Institute for Public Goods and Policies at the National Research Council of Spain (CSIC). His research interests include the areas of 1) Renewable Energy and Energy Transitions and 2) the Circular Economy, innovation and sustainability, with a strong focus on economic actors (firms) and public policy. Currently, he participates in an EU Horizon 2020 projects on renewable energy auctions, an interdisciplinary platform on Circular Economy by CSIC and a research group on Complex Systems in Social Sciences. Previous research project participation include an EU Horizon 2020 project on concentrated solar power and European market cooperation as well as an industry-funded research project on sustainable mobility. He holds a PhD in Management from University of Alcalá, a MSc. in Management from University of Alcalá and BSc. in Management from University of Mannheim. Previous to joining IPP, he worked as Innovation Manager at Herrenknecht AG.

Ángel Paniagua

Research Scientist (Investigador Científico)

Undergraduate degree (1986) and PhD (1990) in Human Geography at Universidad Autónoma de Madrid. First Spanish researcher with publications in Land Use Policy or Journal of Rural Studies. Referee of more than 35 journals around the world.

Scientific editor (in association) in the year 1999 of special issue on Environmental Policies and Sustainability (Revista Internacional de Sociología); in the year 2006 (in association) of the special issue on Public policies, Sustainability and Rural Geography of the journal Boletín de la Asociación de Geógrafos Españoles; and editor in the years 2007-08 of the special issue on Qualification of Space of the journal Arbor edited by CSIC. Member of editorial board of some relevant journals (ISI, SCOPUS) in sociology and environmental studies. Author or coauthor of more 135 papers.

Ángel Paniagua's research focuses on four areas of interest: (1.) social, environmental and cultural dimensions of geographical rural change in depopulated rural areas, (2.) the socio-environmental qualitative research, (3.) the history and theory of Rural Geography and (4.) the relationship between nature and society.

José Fernández-Albertos

Tenured Researcher (Científico Titular)

- Ph.D in Political Science from Harvard University (2007), and is MA (2002) and doctor-member (2007) from the Center for Advanced Research in the Social Sciences of the Juan March Institute. He holds a BA in Political Science and Administration from the Universidad Complutense de Madrid.
- His research spans across the fields of international political economy and comparative politics, and his more recent work analyzes the political underpinnings of monetary regimes, the institutional and social determinants of inter-personal and inter-territorial redistribution, and most recently, the legacy of the great recession on policy preferences across Europe
- He has taught Political Economy, International Political Economy, European Politics and Research Methods at the Universidad Carlos III, Institut Barcelona d'Estudis Internacionals, IE University, Universitat Oberta de Catalunya.
- He has been a visiting fellow at the Center for International Development (Harvard University), the Department of Political Science at the University of California San Diego, and the Centro para la Investigación y Docencia Económicas (CIDE) in Ciudad de Mexico.
- Parts of his work have been presented at the Annual Meetings of the American Political Science Association, the Midwest Political Science Association, the International Political Economy Society, and the European Consortium for Political Research's Joint Sessions and General Conferences, among others.
- His paper "Why is There No Compensation? Trade Liberalization, Exchange Rate Regimes and Public Spending in Latin America" was awarded with the Rudolf Wildenmann prize to the best paper presented at the Joint Sessions of the European Consortium for Political Research, and his article "Dividir lo indivisible. Soberanía popular y separación de poderes en James Madison", published by Revista de Estudios Políticos, was selected as finalist of the Journal of American History David Thelen Award, given by the Organization of American Historians to the best paper on U.S. history not written in English.
- He contributes regularly to El País and is co-editor of the political science blog "Piedras de Papel" at eldiario.es

Post-doctoral researchers

Türkay Salim Nefes: Türkay Nefes completed his PhD at the Sociology Department of the University of Kent in 2010. His doctoral research, titled 'Towards a Sociology of Conspiracy Theories: An Investigation into Conspiratorial Thinking on Dönmes', examines the content, propagation and political effects of anti-Semitic conspiratorial accounts about a crypto-Jewish society in Turkey, called Dönmes (Converts). The study contributes to the academic literature by empirically outlining the socio-political reasons and significance of conspiracy theories. Between July and December 2011, Türkay took part in a postdoctoral project at the Freiburg University, Sociology Institute. His research focused on the use of Durkheim's perspective by one of the founding fathers of Turkish sociology, Ziya Gökalp, in the early twentieth century. In 2020 Türkay has joined the IPP with a "Ramón y Cajal" post-doctoral contract, and is now extending his doctoral research to two main areas: rational choice theory and online conspiracy theories. His research 'The Rise of the Internet as a New Domain of Conspiracy Theories' explores social networks created by online conspiracy theories.

Pre-doctoral researchers

Felipe González De León specialises in Comparative Political Economy. He is particularly interested in the analysis of economic decision-makers and economic governance. Before joining the team, he worked in finance and research. Felipe has a BA in Political Science and Public Administration (USC), MSc in Economics (USC) and MSc in Comparative Politics (LSE). He is currently working on the project "Macroeconomic and fiscal governance in the EU" within the Horizon 2020 Project "Reconciling Europe with its Citizens through Democracy and the Rule of Law".

Diego Santamaria is a PhD candidate in Economics at Universidad Autónoma de Madrid. He works as predoctoral researcher at Institute of Public Goods and Policies of Spanish National Research Council (IPP-CSIC) granted of a FPU fellowship from Science Ministry. He has a Degree in Economics and Master in International Economics from Universidad Autónoma de Madrid. He develops his doctoral thesis in the fields of quantitative, experimental and behavioural economics, by focusing in the determinants of individual inequality acceptance. He also participates in E-Dem project, by investigating the effects of electoral campaigns on affective polarization.

- He was Vice president of Strategies for Development and Public Policies and Chief Economicist at Banco de Desarrollo de América Latina (CAF) and Director General of Instituto Vasco de Competitividad-Orkestra. During ten years he was Investments Director at Compañía Española de Financiación del Desarrollo (COFIDES). He was Head of the Unit responsible for the development of Small and Medium Enterprises at Banco Interamericano de Desarrollo (BID) in Washington, DC. He has been professor of the universities of País Vasco, Sevilla, Federal de Minas Gerais in Belo Horizonte-Brasil, Carlos III in Madrid, etc. He has obtained important grants, including National Science Foundation and Newhouse in the United States, Juan March, Fulbright-Banco de Bilbao, etc. he has a long list of publications in innovation, competitiveness, and economic development, economy and international trade, regional and urban economics, etc. He has a broad knowledge in Latin America; often undertakes consulting and technical assistance projects in the region and collaborates with the media and the press.

Post-doctoral researchers

Manuel Pereira Puga: He is a postdoctoral researcher at CSIC Institute of Public Goods and Policies (IPP). He holds a bachelor and a PhD in Sociology from University of A Coruña (Spain), where he worked as a FPU (Formación de Profesorado Universitario) research fellow. His research interests include the systems and policies of higher education and Research and Development (R&D), as well as the intersection among science, technology and innovation from an interdisciplinary approach.

Sara Degli Esposti: Currently Juan de la Cierva post-doctoral researcher at the IPP, she was previously Research Fellow at the University of Coventry, and Post-Doctoral researcher at the Universidad Oberta de Catalunya (UOC) before then. She also served as Managing Director of the ISMS forum between 2015 and 2017. Her research interests focus on users' information privacy concerns and organisational compliance with data protection law, cybersecurity economics, public acceptance of surveillance technologies. STS and business studies are her epistemic communities.

Sara Lafuente Funes: from 2012 to 2019, she worked at the Spanish National Research Council (CSIC): first as a pre-doctoral researcher within the Bioarreme Project led by Vincenzo Pavone, and later as a postdoc for the EDNA Project led by Nicky Hudson in the UK. Sara is currently in charge of the Subproject 2: Oocyte freezing to extend fertility and rearrange futures in Spain within the CRYOSOCITIES Advanced ERC Grant project at the Goethe University in Frankfurt.

Cristina Peñasco: she was a Postdoctoral Researcher and a Junior Researcher, in conjunction with a competitive PhD scholarship, in the Institute of Public Goods and Policies (IPP) of the Spanish National Research Council (CSIC). In 2014, she was visiting researcher at the Energy Economics Group (EEG) of the Institute of Energy Systems and Electrical Drives at the Vienna University of Technology (TU WIEN). She is now University Lecturer in Public Policy at POLIS, at the University of Cambridge.

Elvira Santiago: She was postdoctoral researcher at the IPP between 2012 and 2015, working in the FP7 project SURPRISE led by Vincenzo Pavone. She is now is lecturer in Social Research Techniques at the Faculty of Sociology, Universidade da Coruña, Spain.

The background features a light blue gradient with several overlapping circles of varying sizes and opacities. A large, semi-transparent white circle is the most prominent feature, positioned behind the text. Other smaller, semi-transparent light blue circles are scattered around it.

IPP TENURED RESEARCHERS 2015

Zaida Chinchilla

Tenured Researcher (Científica Titular)

- She holds her PhD degree in Information Sciences from the University of Granada. She is member of the SCImago Group since its inception, and has participated in some of the group's most ambitious projects, inter alia: "SCImago Journal & Country Rank-SJR" and "SCImago Institutions Rankings-SIR", "Atlas of Science". In 2008, she moved to Madrid (Spain) to work as a tenured researcher at the Institute of Public Goods and Policies (IPP) of Spanish National Research Council (CSIC). Since then, she acts as an external advisor for SCImago Lab.
- She has over a decade of expertise in consultancy by means of analyzing scientometric datasets, with a particular focus on institutional and national-level analysis. She has been extensively working on drafting scientific reports for different national and international organizations and, in the development and analysis of the different indicators and approaches for conducting quantitative science studies. She coordinates the Yearbook on Bibliometrics Indicators for the Spanish National Foundation of Science and Technology (FECYT) since 2003 and collaborates in the OECD Science, Technology and Industry Scoreboard and in the Compendium of Bibliometric Indicators for the Organization for Cooperation and Economic Development (OCDE) since 2013. Co-director of the International Network of Science of Team Science (INSciTS), Editor-in-Chief of Frontiers in Research Metrics and Analytics journal, member of the Distinguished Reviewers Board of Scientometrics journal, and visiting senior researcher of the Indiana University Bloomington in the United States.
- She researches within the domain of scholarly communication and scientometrics developing methodological design and indicators of scientific information systems. Her major research areas are scientometric analyses of scientific domains (geographic and disciplinary) for specific problems resolution and to facilitate decision-making processes; analysis of scientific collaboration and mobility and its impact on scientific results; methodological proposals oriented to the design of indicators and information systems. Currently, her research interests extend on the complementary exploration of new data and approaches, such as the meaning of leadership in science and its influence in the definitions of research agendas for fostering scientific capacities of countries and the potential of team science for solving complex problems.

Elena Corera

Tenured Researcher (Científico Titular)

- PhD in Documentation awarded by the University of Granada in 2007. Member of the SCImago research group since its inception, Elena Corera Álvarez has participated in some of the group's most ambitious projects, including the "Scimago Journal & Country Rank-SJR" (a joint research effort with Elsevier-Scopus), and "Atlas de la Ciencia" (funded by Spain's Ministry for Education and Science through the R&D&I project SEJ-2004-08358-CO2-01/SOCI and Acción Complementaria SEJ2005-24008-E), a project which has expanded in Latin-America - Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Cuba, Mexico, Peru, Portugal and Venezuela - with potential for further expansion. Related projects include "Ranking Iberoamericano de Instituciones de Investigación-RI3" (funded by Universia) and "Mi perfil Investigador-MPI" (financed by the Fundación Española de Ciencia y Tecnología-FECYT). Elena is currently working on the creation of an institutional ranking system based on scientific output included in the Scopus database. These projects have been made possible thanks to close collaboration with research groups from other institutions (Universidad de Extremadura, Universidad Carlos III, Universidad de Alcalá and Universtitat Oberta de Catalunya).
- The SCImago group is highly active, and as a consequence it has signed numerous cooperation agreements with various Spanish institutions, (FECYT, Junta de Andalucía, Principado de Asturias, Consorcio de Bibliotecas Públicas de Galicia, Universitat Oberta de Catalunya, Universidad del País Vasco/Euskal Herriko Unibertsitatea), as well as international institutions (CONICYT, CONACYT, REDALyC, IESALC, Pontificia Universidad Católica de Valparaíso, Universidad de Antioquia, CEPAL...), which has enabled the group to produce scientific reports on internationally visible scientific output for different aggregates. Elena has actively participated in two complementary tasks: the drafting of scientometric reports and coordinating the standardization of databases used to compile these reports, primarily regarding institutions, geographical locations and sectors.
- Her major lines of investigation are: advanced information retrieval techniques for the development of real time information systems; interface design techniques for the visualization of scientific information; analysis and evaluation of scientific domains; scientometric analyses of different domains for specific problem resolution; and information system design for scientometrics to facilitate decision making processes.

Isidro F. Aguillo

- I am the head of the Cybermetrics Lab that is working on the development of web indicators for describing and evaluating academic and research related contents and in the quantitative analysis of the processes of scholarly communication through the Internet. I founded the OA e-journal Cybermetrics, devoted to the publication of webometrics-related papers. The journal was the first electronic journal of the CSIC (1997-2015). I am also the Chief-Editor of the Rankings Web of Universities (since 2004), Research Centers (2006), Hospitals (2008), Business Schools (2008) and Repositories (2008), globally known as Webometrics Rankings. The web portal receives over 8 million of visits per year.
- I was member of the CSIC delegation (1998-99) to the Spanish Office of Science and Technology (SOST) in Brussels. In 2002 I was Metcalfe Visitor Fellow in the University of New South Wales (Sydney, Australia).
- In 2009 I was granted Doctor Honoris Causa by the Universitas Indonesia. In 2015 I was recognized as Doctor Honoris Causa by the National Research Nuclear University of Moscow (MEPHI).
- My teaching related activities comprise about 400 workshops, seminars and conferences in more than 120 Universities and professional societies worldwide. My scientific contributions consists of about 200 papers and books chapters, seventy of them in high impact journals (Google scholar h-index=30) and participation in more than 60 Congresses and International Conferences, sometimes as keynote speaker or session chair, presenting over 100 communications and posters. I was one of the organizers of the 11th Conference of the International Society for Scientometrics and Informetrics (Madrid, 2007).
- I led or contributed to research projects funded by the Spanish government or by the European Commission: RISIS (Open infrastructure for scientific data); OpenAIRE (EU Repositories), ACUMEN (Portfolio of scientific indicators for individuals); QEAVIS (eHumanities) or the Network of Excellence MA2VICMR of the Community of Madrid. I have also been member of several committees of experts of the DG Research (European Commission).
- My academic background includes a Licenciatura (MSc) in Biology (Zoology) by the Universidad Complutense de Madrid (1985), a Master en Información y Documentación (MID) by the Universidad Carlos III de Madrid and a Diploma de Estudios Avanzados (DEA) by the Universidad de Granada.
